Understanding Child Development Through Observation

6 month(s) to complete

Sincere Gratitude

Observation

London, UK

University College London

As part of the programme at UCL, students undertake a weekly hour-long observation of a baby at home; this is to acquaint students with the capacities, growth and changes that occur in the early months of life and to enable them to learn first-hand about this fascinating developmental period. The aim is that the theory is understood on both an emotional and intellectual level.
