Experiment with heartbeat monitoring, computer task and questionnaire

Senate House University of London, Malet St, London WC1E 7HU, Združeno kraljestvo

School of Advanced Study University of London

If you participate, you will have two electrodes attached to your chest and one to the lower back to record your heartbeat. You will be shown pictures of faces flashing on a computer screen and asked to choose which figure you would vote for in a hypothetical national election. You will also be asked to answer short questionnaires about your political orientation and socio-political views. Overall, this will last between 30 and 45 minutes and you will receive 8£ for completing the study.
