Hello! I am interested in the experiences of women who are recovering from substance use disorders. One thing that I have noticed over the years is that some woman who have never self-harmed previously began doing so while in a substance use recovery program. Self-harm may include self-cutting, burning, hitting, etc. I am curious about why I am observing this trend. I would like to hear from women who have had similar experiences related to substance use recovery and self-harm.
