King's College London

This is an online study about the compensation strategies used to fit in, when someone feels socially different to others around them. We are interested in the strategies that people may use to get by in social situations, when they feel that they aren't naturally 'getting it' socially. We would like to hear from anyone who has used strategies in this way, now or in the past. This may include, but is not restricted to, individuals on the Autism Spectrum. 18+ years old only.
